

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates generally to a catheter which enables the venting or decompression of gases therethrough and, more particularly, to enteral tubes or catheters. The catheter may be configured to allow continuous venting with reduced 5 concern about liquid leakage or the need for the user to limit their activities or assume certain positions during venting.